

All across the United States, American Red Cross volunteers help save lives—assisting disaster victims, delivering community education courses and working with millions of volunteer blood donors.

Each year hundreds of thousands of Americans donate their time and talent, but we need your help to continue to deliver these vital programs and services.

LEARN HOW GOOD IT CAN FEEL TO LEND A HELPING HAND.

Together, American Red Cross volunteers:

- Assist victims of hurricanes, earthquakes, tornadoes, floods, winter storms and other disasters, including families forced from their homes by fire.

- Provide Community Disaster Education and first aid, CPR, swimming, babysitter preparedness and other classes.
- Translate for non-English speakers so that they can receive Red Cross services.
- Work as nurses offering expertise, care and compassion.
- Facilitate emergency communications between military personnel and their families.
- Provide community-based services for countless seniors, people with disabilities and people who are homeless.

- Organize and participate in Red Cross Youth Clubs and Disaster Action Teams.
- Donate professional expertise in accounting, finance, public relations, Web site development, administration and information technology.
- Help trace victims of war and disaster and reunite families of the Holocaust.
- Fill leadership roles at local offices, including on task forces and boards of directors.

YOU ARE NEEDED BY THE RED CROSS. RIGHT NOW.

WHO ARE RED CROSS VOLUNTEERS?

We are people who help with a single event or several times a month. Some of us have been involved in our communities for 10, 20, even 80 years or more—providing lifesaving services and leadership and helping to prevent, prepare for and respond to emergencies. We represent our communities, and we speak many languages. We are all different ages and ethnicities. Join us!
